82 die in mysterious Lebanese plane crash

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia, Jan. 1 (R). — A Lebanese airliner crashed in the Saudi Arabian desert at dawn Thursday, killing all 82 people aboard.

The new year was just two days old when the 67 passengers and 15 crew boarded the East Airlines flight 438 en route for Beirut and Muscat. They had been delayed eight hours at Beirut airport because of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet on which they were scheduled to develop engine trouble.

M.E.A. officials in Beirut gave the names of 14 Europeans who had been aboard the plane. They included Mr. Robert Kulka and his wife Micheline, who were flying from Paris to Muscat. Mr. Kulka was formerly Manager of Beirut's Phoenicia Hotel, which was badly damaged in last month's street fighting, and his successor was found dead in the battered building.

Mr. Kulka was manager of the Intercontinental Hotel in Paris and was believed to have been going to Muscat to inspect the Intercontinental just built there. Six men had come from Athens — G. Prodhis, E. M. Sisis, S. Saitos, A. Traigas, Vratsides, and G. Paviakos, four from London — D. T. Stevenson, C. Witheridge, B. G. Buffall, and G. Holyoiake, one from Larana, Cyprus — P. Minaides — and one from Oslo.

The latter was a man called Strand whose first name was either Patrick or Eric and who was believed to be a seaman going to join a ship at Dubai. The nationalities of these passengers was not known, the officials said. The cause of the crash would remain a matter of speculation until the investigation teams found the black box recording the crew's conversations and monitoring the aircraft's performance.

Asked if they were considering the possibility that a bomb might have been planted aboard the plane, they said this was ruled out by the fact that the plane had left Beirut eight hours late.

If a timebomb had been aboard it would have exploded while the plane was still at Beirut and if a bomb activated by atmospheric pressure had been planted that would have exploded soon after takeoff as the plane climbed immediately to its cruising height of 33,000 feet.

Flight 438 should have been a Boeing 747 but the jumbo jet that should have made the trip developed engine trouble, and passengers were transferred to the 720 which, the officials said, had a full pre-flight check before departure.

Government and Aramco teams who flew in three planes to the crash site returned here Thursday night with the remains of more than 50 of the crash victims, Aramco officials said.

The officials, who did not go with the search teams, said the bodies would be taken to a temporary Aramco morgue for identification.

(In Beirut, an M.E.A. spokesman said later Thursday night that 73 bodies had been recovered before darkness fell. He said the plane was in three sections, lying close together, but

Algeria alerts vets for Sahara action

ALGIERS, Jan. 1 (R & AFP). — Algeria has alerted the veterans of its independence war to stand by as tension mounts between Algeria and Morocco over the Western Sahara, informed sources said Thursday.

Tanks and infantry from the Algerian standing army of more than 70,000 men have been stationed on the long border with Morocco for several weeks and have been reinforced. The border is closed to Algerians and Moroccans but travelers of other nationalities report being allowed to cross.

There has been no official comment here on reports from Rabat that 26,000 Moroccans have been obliged to leave Algeria but officials have said that Moroccans who were illegally in Algeria have been told to go.

The sources could give no figure for the number of veterans now on standby but a full mobilization of veterans would double the manpower resources of the army.

Observers said Algerian preparations for any repercussions from the Sahara crisis appeared to have been stepped up since a 24-hour visit to Algeria by Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi at the beginning of this week.

President Houari Boumedienne told reporters after meeting the Libyan leader that the two countries rejected any concessions either on the Sahara or on the Palestinian issue.

The semi-official Algerian daily El Moudjahid Thursday carried a front page report from the 'Liberated Territories' in the Sahara which said more than 1,000 Moroccan troops had been killed or wounded in fighting in the territory since late October.

The Moroccan Army lost 327 killed and 814 wounded and 12 tanks and 64 others military vehicles destroyed, it said. It gave no account of Polisario losses.

The report also said that in the fight for the southern most Sahara town of La Guera, occupied by the Mauritanian army.

Scattered shooting amid general calm in Beirut

BEIRUT, Jan. 1, (R). — The New Year opened quickly in Beirut Thursday with the Government's efforts to restore law and order to the streets achieving growing success despite scattered shooting incidents.

Snipers fired a few shots in the commercial centre of the city and between the suburbs of Ain al-Rummaneh and Shiyah.

In one incident a gunman opened fire on security forces in Damascus Street. They fired back and silenced him, police said. It was not known if he was killed or had abandoned his position.

Damascus Street is part of the ragged line dividing the city into two armed camps.

Shooting resumed shortly after midnight in the southern and northeastern suburbs after two days during which warring factions appeared to be hardening their stand politically.

The Gulf between them yawning as wide as ever. Moslems and leftists continued to demand a greater voice in the government, but conservative Christian leaders rejected any change, Interior Minister Camille Chamoun told Agence France Presse Wednesday.

His close ally, Pierre Gemayel, head of the Phalangist Party, said the situation has "reached a stage where there is nobody qualified to negotiate with."

If Christians and Moslems could not live together because of foreign meddling, partition would be a natural solution, he said.

Officials announced that the private militia of both sides completed the evacuation of central Beirut Wednesday night.

Yet witnesses saw these factional fighters at various points in the "evacuated" area firing their guns into the sky at midnight to usher in the New Year.

That indicated they could manage their abandoned harricades in a matter of moments if large-scale hostilities broke out again, as they have repeatedly since the first clash last April.

The shooting since then has killed an estimated 8,000 and wounded 24,000 — about one casualty for every 100 citizens in the country.

A mop-haired teenager with a stubby Kalashnikov rifle under his arm Thursday sauntered down a side street off the capital's Riad al-Solh Square within 100 metres of troops under orders since Wednesday to shoot people carrying arms without authorisation.

Another youth with a sub-machine gun stood in the middle of broad Fouad al-Awal Avenue handing out propaganda sheets to the few cars that dared to stop.

The rival factions have pulled back from some of their forward positions along a line which runs from north to south through the city and separates the mainly Moslem west from the predominantly Christian east.

But in areas behind the front line where troops have not been deployed, gunmen were as visible as ever. Troops have taken up positions in the city centre and today the area was barred

As a result, El Moudjahid said, the commando leader was set free "the day after total completion of the operation."

It described comment in the Western press on Algeria's action as "base denigrations."

"Algeria's action was legally right and in accordance with the firm recommendations of the other countries of the organisation in order to develop by all means a respect for the complete integrity of the hostages and to avoid a catastrophe which would have damaged irreparably the struggle of the Third World and its solidarity," El Moudjahid wrote.

York begins on new year plan

AMMAN, (JNA). — Work began yesterday under the Five-Year Development Plan. The plan, under Prime Minister Rifai, Wednesday evening approved the Plan for 1976-80.

The plan's main aim is to continue the developing process in the Kingdom, accelerating the pace of growth effectively with comprehensive planning which takes into account the necessity of meeting all kinds of challenges facing the development movements in the Arab World.

Priorities will be given to production sectors and auxiliary infrastructure capital programs which aim at creating the necessary developments and changes in order to give the Jordanian economy more reliance on its own potentialities for growth and not through foreign aid which should be complementary, not alternative, to local possibilities.

With the cabinet approval of the new Five-Year Plan on the day of the Three-Year Plan, work in the Five-Year Plan will be carried out with the 76 budget which is the first of the Plan.

Hundreds of U.S.-backed troops reported in Angola

BOSTON, Jan. 1 (R). — Hundreds of American ex-servicemen have been sent to Angola and more have been trained and equipped to go, the Christian Science Monitor says in a report published Friday.

"Despite congressional efforts to keep the United States out of the Angolan civil war, the covert American operation is increasing and becoming more organized," the newspaper says.

Quoting sources close to the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the article, written by David Anable, says the CIA is "indirectly recruiting American ex-servicemen, training them, dispatching them to South Africa and contributing toward their pay via funds for Zaire and Angola's two pro-American fronts (FNLA and UNITA), and providing them with indigenous forces with light and heavy weaponry."

Anable says a recruiting programme for 150 helicopter pilots and mechanics — to fly and maintain a squadron of helicopter gunships — has started in the U.S.

He says 13 helicopter gunships are already on their way from France to Angola via South Africa.

The writer says the picture of an increasing American involvement emerged from contacts with senior mercenary officers both in Angola and the United States.

A CIA spokesman Thursday refused to comment on the report and White House deputy press secretary John Carlson said "the story has no foundation and is not true."

President Ford said in an interview published Wednesday he was optimistic that the conflict in Angola could be resolved in a way that would avoid a head-on U.S.-Soviet confrontation.

"I think they (the Russians) recognise that detente in its broadest context... can have a much greater meaning than an unfortunate head-to-head conflict in Angola," he told the Washington Post.

He suggested, however, that behind the scenes talks with the Russians — on which he would not elaborate — could be an even more important factor in finding a solution.

Algeria releases raiders after OPEC states' calls

ALGIERS, Jan. 1, (AFP). — Algeria freed the raiders who seized oil ministers at OPEC's Vienna headquarters last week out of "respect for the wishes of the governments involved in this affair," the Algerian daily El Moudjahid declared Thursday.

The decision to set free the group headed by Carlos, alias the Jackal, was therefore not the sole responsibility of Algeria, the newspaper stated. It noted that one of the conditions imposed by the commandos for releasing the oil ministers was that the raiders should then be freed.

As a result, El Moudjahid said, the commando leader was set free "the day after total completion of the operation."

It described comment in the Western press on Algeria's action as "base denigrations."

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

Both AL-RAI and AL DUSTOUR commented on the new year and reviewed the major issues which dominated the past year.

The papers said that hopes for the new year might be numerous but what is important at this time is that each individual should realise his responsibilities to work in fulfilling his hopes.

AL-RAI reviewed last year in a philosophical manner, recognising the great achievements reached in Jordan in all fields.

"With joy we say farewell to the past year, and with joy we welcome the new year" AL-RAI said.

"We, the people of this region, have witnessed the Romans Jews and Crusaders invade this land. Some invaders have gone and others are still here, but they too are eventually leaving," the paper said.

The paper continued, saying, "It is true that this generation has inherited many problems and may be unable to cope with them, but our forthcoming generation will no doubt erase all categories of backwardness and hate and bring to this nation its past heritage while take its place in the world community."

AL DUSTOUR said that among the wishes of the Arab in the new year is a hope for real solidarity and coordination for the service of the one cause in the Arab world.

"Arab leadership is now called upon to rise to its responsibilities in facing the Zionist challenge which threatens the present and future of this nation."

"Realising responsibilities is different from fulfilling a wish" the paper said.

AL DUSTOUR stressed that the path which the Arab nation has to cross is difficult, but there is no other choice if it intends to liberate Arabs in the occupied land and in the forefront of Jerusalem.

"Occurrences during the past years teach us that Arab solidarity is basic to any objective and successful Arab move" AL DUSTOUR said.

"These facts," the paper continued reflect "the great responsibility the Arab leadership is shouldering"

A year has passed with a wound in the Arab East (Lebanon) and smoke at al-Maghrib over the desert is being felt.

It is hoped that the smoke will not ignite into fire, and that this great nation will be united to concentrate their efforts in facing the real challenge which is represented in Zionist aggression on Arab land. The paper said.

Finally the paper said, "we hope the new year will be a year of responsibility and not only of hopes and wishes, so that it will be a year of Arab unified action in all the Arab sphere."

Egypt starts work on Sinai warning station

TEL AVIV, Dec. 31, (R). — A convoy of 36 Egyptian vehicles carrying soldiers, workmen and earthmoving equipment crossed Israeli-held territory in the Sinai desert dawn Wednesday, to begin work on an Egyptian early-warning station in the Giddi Pass.

The three square kilometre area for the station, on hill 720 south of the pass, was marked out by Israeli surveyors and officers of the U.N. Emergency Forces (UNEF) Tuesday.

Swedish soldiers of UNEF are to man the perimeter of the station, set up under the latest Israeli-Egyptian interim peace agreement.

The Egyptians are permitted to remain in the area overnight, with facilities to return to Egypt via the Giddi road twice a day, if they wish, in the early morning and evening. They entered the road under U.N. supervision.

Until the final pullback, Israeli troops will accompany the Egyptians as they move in and out of the area. Any minor problems during the building work will be dealt with by a joint commission of Israeli, Egyptian and U.N. officers.

The Israelis already have their twin listening post at Um Khasheiba on the western side of the Sinai mountain range.

The military correspondent of Israel's afternoon newspaper Maariv said Wednesday the Egyptians had introduced army commandos into the coastal strip along the Gulf of Suez leading towards the Abu Rudeis oilfields they reoccupied last month. This, he alleged, was in contravention of the interim agreement.

He claimed the soldiers were dressed in police uniforms and were manning road blocks.

The correspondent said the Israeli authorities were not making an issue of this alleged

S. Viet provinces joined with Hanoi

SAIGON, Dec. 31, (AFP). — The restructuring of North Vietnam's provincial set-up announced at the national assembly over the week-end confirms that two of South Vietnam's provinces, northern-most Quang Tri, and Thua Thien, whose capital is Hue, are now attached to the North, according to press reports here Wednesday.

Reports that the two South Vietnamese provinces had been administratively part of North Vietnam for some time now had been circulating in Saigon.

The privately-owned Tin Sang newspaper here, in a report from Hanoi, said that Quang Tri and Thua Thien, under the new set up, would link with the North Vietnamese province of Quang Binh to form Binh Tri Thien.

The restructuring, as approved by the National Assembly in Hanoi, will affect 13 North Vietnamese provinces, and comes at a time when, according to observers here, similar changes are being carried out among South Vietnam's 44 provinces.

The figures were double those for the previous year.

The export sales of two civilian aircraft, the Arava Transport and the Executive Westwind Jet, amounted to $12 million, Mr. Schwimmer added.

Portugal's deficit budget shows cuts for military

LISBON, Jan. 1 (AFP). — The Portuguese budget for 1976 includes a sharp drop in military spending and national security costs, partly due to the pull-out from Angola.

The military account comes to two billion escudos (about $80 million) against nine billion escudos in 1975.

At the same time the Government has earmarked 22 billion escudos ($900 million) for an investment programme in 1976.

Overall budget expenditure will be 105 billion escudos and revenue 70 billion escudos. The deficit is being met by bond issues.

The social services will receive nearly half the money under the state investment programme. Education and agriculture will also benefit.

Aid will be provided to increase the capital of several state companies, and this measure is seen as a first step to the creation of a national development fund.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes Thursday called on the Portuguese people to make sacrifices to help the country through its serious economic crisis.

In his New Year broadcast, the President said the economic disorganisation of Portugal was obvious.

"Urgent and rapid solutions are needed so that the Portuguese can look to the future with hope," he said shortly after the Government announced the tough austerity programme to tackle the crisis.

The police said they had not yet identified those responsible.

Congress party convention gives Mrs. Gandhi free hand

NEW DELHI, Jan. 1, (AFP). — The 75th convention of the Indian Congress Party ended Thursday after approving unanimously resolutions to postpone India's elections for at least a year and to revise the constitution.

On the recommendation of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, the 4,000 delegates, who have been meeting at Chandigarh since Sunday, also re-elected Mr. Dev Kant Barooah as President of the Congress party.

They also voted unanimously to continue the state of emergency which has been in effect since June 26.

The elections were to have been held in February 1976.

The practical effect of the Congress Party meeting was to give Prime Minister Gandhi a free hand to follow the strict policy she began with the declaration of a state of emergency. Her task will be made easier by the fact that the Congress Party has an absolute majority in both houses of Parliament.

It is felt that Mrs. Gandhi will have no difficulty in winning approval of her reform programmes and in implementing her as yet unannounced ideas for the revamping of India's constitution.

Independence for Afars and Issas

PARIS, Dec. 31, (AFP). — France Wednesday announced it will grant independence to the French Territory of Afars and Issas (TFAI), better known as Djibouti, its last African possession.

But the French Government expects to retain a military base in the area of the main town and port of Djibouti.

President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing declared that the territory, formerly known as French Somaliland or Djibouti, would shortly "accede to international sovereignty".

The territory, of 23,000 square kilometres, occupies a strategic position on the Gulf of Aden, between Somalia and Ethiopia. Its population was last estimated at about 125,000.

The announcement, which followed a cabinet meeting, came at the end of a two-day visit to Paris by the territory's Prime Minister Ali Aref Bourhan.

Mr. Ali Aref said after his meeting with President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing that "perfect agreement" had been reached on the independence question.

Wednesday's joint communiqué following the talks stated that France was ready to "guarantee" the future state's integrity and security.

For Mr. Ali Aref, security is a question of prime importance.

He fears the territorial ambitions of the TFAI's powerful neighbours, Ethiopia and Somalia.

France held to the principle of self-determination for TFAI, through the French National Assembly, according to Andre Rossi, the Government spokesman.

There are expected to be new negotiations between France and Mr. Ali Aref's Government aimed at setting out conditions for independence, during the next few months.

The new president elected Cairo as the organisation's permanent headquarters.

US arms shipments to Israel dwindle stocks

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, (AFP). — Allocation of arms for Israel and South Vietnam from American army stocks "adversely affected overall U.S. readiness", the General Accounting Office of Congress said in a report from which extracts were published here Tuesday.

Hundreds of tanks, planes, missiles and other weapons were removed from operational stocks and delivered to Israel after the October 1973 war, and to South Vietnam in the last year of the Indochina conflict the report said.

Arms worth $8.5 billion were supplied in the two countries between July 1972 and July 1974, it added.

Delivery programmes were also speeded up several times in urgent cases, completed the U.S. operation potential.

On June 30 1974, the report said, normal U.S. reserves were 1,043 tanks short. Among these were 368 M10 tanks taken from stocks intended for emergency use in Europe.

Burmese President slaps officer during X-mas rage

BANGKOK, Dec. 30 (AFP). — The Bangkok Daily Post Tuesday reported that Burmese President Ne Win recently stormed into a Christmas party in Rangoon and broke it up after slapping a high ranking officer who was among the guests.

The paper, citing "An eyewitness passing through," said President Ne Win accompanied by three military aides walked into the party at about 11.00 p.m. two hours after it began. Wearing a brown sweater over civilian clothes, he approached a high ranking officer and slapped him four or five times before pushing aside a drummer in the orchestra, tearing holes in the drums and kicking over amplifiers.

Israel loses Arab labour

AMMAN, (JNA). — Arab labourers are leaving the West Bank heading to the East Bank of Jordan as the Jordanian economy is witnessing prosperity in general, the Jerusalem Post reported on Monday.

No statistics were given by the Paper but such a move is regarded a reverse to the situation which existed two years ago when labourers were utilising their summer visit by working in the occupied territories.

The Paper added that the number of labourers who are working at Israeli establishments is on the decline specially in the construction and agricultural field.

The latest Israeli official statistics revealed an 11% decline.

Construction rate rises

AMMAN, (JNA). — A statistical bulletin revealed that the areas allocated for housing in the Amman and Zarka areas have increased in September 1975 compared to September 1974.

The bulletin added that the area totaled 39 thousand square meters in 1975 while in 1974 it totaled 29 thousand square meters.

The numbers reflect that Jordan is witnessing a blossoming construction development.

Turin police nab 11 kidnap suspects

TURIN, Italy, Jan. 1, (AFP). — Police here Thursday arrested 11 suspects immediately after the release of 35-day kidnap victim Carla Ovazza, a relative by marriage of the multi-millionaire Fiat automobile company President, Giovanni Agnelli.

Mrs. Ovazza was freed shortly after the new year began, reportedly in exchange for a ransom of 600 million lire (about $400,000). She was picked up, apparently unharmed, by a family friend at a place identified by the kidnappers in a telephone call to lawyers who negotiated the ransom deal. "Police said they were 'practically certain' the 11 suspects were guilty of kidnapping Mrs. Ovazza on November 26. They included a person arrested several years ago for attempting to kidnap a nephew of Mr. Agnelli.

Official sources refused to confirm the ransom amount— one 20th of the original record demand.

Unofficial sources said the kidnappers first picked Mr. Agnelli's daughter as their target, but changed their minds when they learned she was pregnant.

Venezuela takes over full control of its oil industry

CARACAS, Jan. 1, (R). — Venezuela Thursday formally nationalised its oil industry, fifth largest in the world, ending more than 50 years of foreign control.

President Carlos Andres Perez hoisted a huge Venezuelan flag at the site of the country's first commercially productive well near Lake Maracaibo, in Western Zulia state, to symbolise the takeover.

About 150 guests, including representatives of all the members of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), watched the ceremony at oilwell Zumaque One, 800 kilometres west of Caracas.

Zumaque One was drilled in 1914 and shortly afterwards Venezuela began exporting crude oil at the rate of 332 barrels per day.

Exports now average 2.2 million barrels per day, with 100,000 more barrels kept back for domestic use.

The industry with more than 30,000 workers and responsible for around 85 per cent of the country's foreign exchange earnings—some $9 billion last year—is now controlled by the state corporation Petroven.

Petroven takes over the assets of 21 foreign companies and subsidiaries, including Crude—controlled by Exxon—and Royal Dutch Shell.

The nationalisation bill was passed by Congress last August, after almost a year of committee work.

The foreign companies have accepted compensation totalling $1.018 billion, part in cash, the rest in government bonds repayable within five years at interest of six per cent per annum.

All Venezuela's political parties approve of nationalisation, but opponents of President Perez's Democratic Action (AD) Party disagree with some of the details of the bill.

A world without enough wool?

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AFP). — The world could experience a wool shortage in a few years unless world prices rise to a level that is more attractive to producers, the Commonwealth Secretariat has warned in its latest textile bulletin.

The Secretariat said that during the current 1975-76 year, wool output will be only 17,000 tons (0.6 per cent) higher than the level of the previous year. The latter, however, had seen output five per cent higher than the year before.

The Secretariat said that during the current 1975-76 in the current year would suffice, even if there is a real recovery in the textile industry next year. Accumulated stocks built up during a recession in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa have hit record levels.

Guards will outnumber athletes at Olympics

INNSBRUCK, Austria, Dec. 31, (R). — Police and security guards will outnumber competitors at the Winter Olympic Games starting in Innsbruck on February 4, police said Wednesday.

About 2,500 police and gendarmes have been drafted to Innsbruck from all parts of Austria for the 12-day games, a spokesman said. This compares with about 2,000 competitors from nearly 40 countries.

Police precautions, already rigorous, have been sharply increased since guerrillas attacked the Vienna headquarters of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) ten days ago, taking ten oil ministers hostage.

Police said workers setting up the Olympic Village and other installations in Innsbruck were being carefully checked. Security may be even tighter if top national leaders come to the Innsbruck games.

The Shah of Iran, a keen skier, has said he may make a visit. If he does, he will be given a large personal bodyguard. The Iranian Interior Minister was one of the OPEC ministers taken hostage in Vienna and threatened with death.

Austrian officials are also ready for a rumoured visit by President Ford, also a ski-fan, but this is considered less likely.

When Mr Ford met President Anwar Sadat of Egypt in Salzburg last June, 1,500 Austrian police were on duty at the scene.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

● GAEVLE, Sweden. — A seven-foot-long Boa Constrictor has been taken on as night watchman at a pinball gallery here. When the gallery is closed, a sign on the door warns of the snake. During the day the reptile sleeps in a box over a heater.

● BELGRADE. — Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, who will be 84 in May, stayed up until 6 a.m. celebrating the new year and appeared on television, throwing handfuls of confetti and puffing a Dutch cigar. The Yugoslav head of state saw in the new year at Zagreb, the main city of Croatia, dressed in a jaunty yachting cap and a dinner jacket. Marshal Tito dined at a hotel before going to the theatre and later to a soldiers' canteen.

● WASHINGTON. — The population of the United States reached 215 million Wednesday morning, according to a "census clock" just installed at the Department of Commerce.

The clock ticks off an increase in the nation's population at the rate of one person every 21 seconds. One American is born every ten seconds, but one dies every 16 seconds.

● HONG KONG. — Chinese First Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping gave a luncheon in Peking Thursday in honour of Julie Eisenhower, the daughter of former President Richard Nixon, and her husband David. The lunch followed a ceremony at which Mr. Teng wished the young couple a happy new year and accepted greetings from Mr. Nixon. Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower, here on a private visit, Wednesday met Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who told them that Mr. Nixon was welcome to revisit China.

● PARIS. — The French Communist Party has announced that 93,873 people joined its ranks in 1975 — a record for the post-war period. The party's Political Bureau said 1,802 new cells had been formed in factories and other workplaces and 276 in rural areas, bringing the total number of cells to 23,178. The Party's estimated total strength is now 550,000 — just over one per cent of the population of France.

● ROME. — The Italian Interior Ministry Thursday released figures showing that kidnapping has become one of Italy's most rapidly growing industries. It said 61 people were kidnapped for ransom in Italy in 1975, compared with 35 in 1974 and 17 in 1973. The average ransom comes out to about $1.4 million for each victim.

● VATICAN CITY. — Pope Paul VI will start the year resting for two weeks from the tiring burdens he has supported during the holy year, Vatican sources reported Thursday. The pope would cancel his audiences in order to take leave of his crushing duties, which he has borne remarkably well for a man of his age, 78, the sources said.

Any sudden increase in demand for raw materials could bring sharp and exaggerated price rises owing to the current curtailment of supplies and the general low level of investment in new production.

The commodities thought to be most susceptible to such a squeeze are wool, rubber, silver and possibly coffee. The need for the stabilising influence of effective commodity agreements is expected to become more apparent, and the progress of the various international discussions on this sensitive subject will be closely watched.

The first step forward may be provided by the various committees formed after the Paris economic conference held in mid-December, although preparation for the UNCTAD (United Nations Conference on Trade and Development) meeting on commodities slated for May in Nairobi has already run into snags. The IMF (International Monetary Fund) Interim Committee of 20 January meeting in Kingston (Jamaica) to decide on the Fund's proposed 25 million ounce gold sale will also have a long-term effect.

Tapline resumes oil pumping to Lebanon

BEIRUT, Dec. 31 (AFP). — Pumping of Saudi Arabian oil to Lebanon via the Tapline has resumed, the pipeline company said here Wednesday.

But the flow was being kept down to 150,000 barrels a day because there was plenty of oil already in tanks at Zahran. This stored oil was enough for two weeks' requirements in Lebanon.

The Trans-Arabian pipeline takes oil to the port of Zahran from the Saudi Arabian oilfields. Pumping was suspended last February when Lebanon got into an argument on oil prices with Saudi Arabia and the pipeline company.

Even so, on two occasions in August and November, Saudi Arabia let some oil through to prevent Lebanon suffering a fuel crisis at a particularly tense moment.

China extends aid for Nepal cotton project

KATHMANDU, Nepal, Jan. 1, (AFP). — Work has begun on an $18 million textile factory, built with Chinese assistance, which will meet 20 per cent of Nepal's needs when completed within three years.

Minister of State for Commerce and Industry Harkha Bahadur Gurung laid the foundation stone for the plant located at Hetaunda, 90 kilometres south of Kathmandu.

More than 60 Chinese technicians have already arrived in Hetaunda to help in the project.

When completed, the factory will produce ten million metres of cotton textiles a year plus cotton yarn to supply cotton industries in Nepal.

India has been supplying cotton yarns and raw cotton for a Nepalese privately-run cotton mill, but a continuous supply for the Chinese-supported factory is not guaranteed because of the state of Sino-Indian relations.

India has been supplying Nepal with $55 to $60 million worth of cotton textiles a year, but the new factory should cut down the trade.

Nepal recently signed a bilateral trade agreement with Egypt under which Egypt will

Japan budget aims to prod deflation moves

TOKYO, Jan. 1 (R). — Prime Minister Takeo Miki said Thursday the downward trend in the Japanese economy had halted and that a series of deflationary measures introduced last year were beginning to take effect.

"The Japanese economy as a whole has already bottomed out — there is no question about it," Mr. Miki told a New Year news conference, explaining that the 1976 budget, which is to receive parliamentary approval by the end of March, was designed to follow up measures taken in 1975 to reflate the economy.

Mr. Miki said his main foreign policy aim in the new year is to conclude a peace and friendship treaty with China and move towards closer relations with Asian countries.

In an earlier development, the Japanese Cabinet Wednesday approved a revised draft of its 1976 fiscal year budget also aimed at reflation of the economy and boosting exports.

The budget, to be presented to Parliament in late January, includes a 21 per cent rise in public works spending and an 81 per cent jump in the limit for Export-Import Bank facilities to promote exports.

The Government is budgeting for a total expenditure of 24,296 billion yen ($18 billion), an increase of 14.1 per cent over the 1975 fiscal year.

Conference proposes pan-Arab university

KUWAIT, Jan. 1 (R). — A conference on developing Arab manpower resources Wednesday recommended creation of a pan-Arab university in Kuwait.

Some 250 Arab intellectuals, scientists and academics, mainly resident in the United States, attended the three-day conference, organised by Kuwait in co-operation with the Society of Arab Graduates of American Universities.

They called on Arab governments to join together in setting up the new university to help promote Arab culture.

The conference also expressed alarm at an increase in illiteracy in the Arab World and called for a pan-Arab plan to eradicate it within a specified period.

The conference also called for lifting barriers to travel between Arab countries, increased educational opportunities for Arab women and moves to reverse the brain drain to the West, by offering terms similar to those enjoyed by Arabs outside the Arab World.

TEHRAN, Dec. 31 (AFP). — Iran has agreed to extend a $15 million credit to Tunisia to help build the Sidi Salem Dam, total cost of which will be $300 million, it was announced here Wednesday.

The protocol on the credit was signed here Tuesday. Some $3 million of the $15 million have already been transferred under terms of a protocol signed last year.

An Iranian delegation is to visit Tunisia soon to hold talks on expansion of bilateral trade. It will also negotiate purchase of Tunisian olive oil, fruits and phosphates.

The two countries have also agreed to study possibilities for exchange of experts in information theory.

A new American space era

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1, (AP). — American space year 1976 will be marked by two major events: the first "steps" of the future "Space Shuttle", and the landing of two robots on Mars.

The Space Shuttle programme, which will enable the Americans to make their comeback into habited space flight in 1980, will move into first gear in September when the first "Space Shuttle" emerges from the factory. NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Agency) intends to build five.

The Shuttle is NASA's touchstone for the exploration of near space. The first space craft that can be used more than once, the Shuttle will take into space astronauts or material for such projects as the planned European space laboratory.

When it comes out of the Palmdale plant in California, the Shuttle will go to the nearby Edwards Air Base where the first tests will take place at the beginning of 1977.

In the realm of planetary exploration, the major event will be the landing on Mars in July and September of the two Viking probes which were launched last summer. As they approach Mars they will each split into two, one part remaining in orbit around the planet, the other dropping down to make a soft landing.

One of the main aims of the Viking project is to analyse the atmosphere and soil on Mars to determine to what extent life is possible there.

In the telecommunications

Finally, NASA and its different agencies will continue studying all the data which still flows in from most of the satellites and probes sent up in recent years. For example, the five probes sent to the moon since the Apollo 12 mission in 1969 will send back to earth data on the lunar environment, each station being able to transmit nine million items of information a day.

GEOS, Europe's latest and most advanced geo-stationary scientific satellite, is due to be launched by rocket from an American test range towards the end of 1976 and will be an important part of a two-year international magnetospheric study.

field, NASA will carry out several launchings, either for itself or on behalf of international organisations or other countries.

In principle there will be the orbiting of the first three Marisat satellites for maritime navigation, two Intelsat satellites, the second and third satellites launched by RCA (Radio Corporation of America)—the first was launched in December 1975—and an Indonesian satellite, Indonesia-A.

There will be intense activity in the scientific field with the continuation of the Spar programme of experiments in near zero-gravity surroundings, the orbiting of the Lageos (Laser geodynamic satellite) which will enable observation of the tectonic movements of the earth, and West Germany's Helios-B satellite.

Several satellites will be sent up to help meteorologists, including two Itos (Improved Tiros Operational Satellite) to measure earth temperatures, observe clouds, etc., and one Geos (Geostational Operational Environmental Satellite) to collect weather and environmental data.

The year women organised for progress

LONDON, Dec. 31, (R). — Junko Tabei, Margaret Thatcher and Julie Manning appear to have little in common except their sex, but their achievements in 1975 helped dramatise that this was the year of the woman.

Mrs Tabei became the first woman to climb Mount Everest, Mrs Thatcher the first of her sex to lead a major political party in Britain, the Conservatives, and Julie Manning one of the first two women in the Tanzanian cabinet.

Elsewhere, International Women's Year saw some surprising, and occasionally significant, developments as it stumbled from conference to conference.

It wasn't all talk, however. The women of Iceland went on strike in October to demonstrate their importance to the economy. They stayed away from their jobs, left the dishes unwashed and beds unmade in a display of solidarity that almost brought the country to a standstill.

Women asserted their rights, as they saw them, in sometimes strident tones. At a conference of some of the world's most influential women held in Paris, an African delegate was booed for announcing that her government was awarding gold medals to mothers of more than 12 children.

Malaysian women leaders called on their government to ban beauty contests which they said degraded womanhood.

In Britain, women established a new publishing firm for women authors who wanted to write about matters of female interest. They called it Virago—meaning a woman of masculine strength.

The Amazon image was maintained by an apparently growing number of women who took part in guerilla attacks and bank robberies throughout the world.

The most important gains for what used to be called the fair sex, however, came in the less spectacular form of legislation aimed at giving them equality of opportunity.

Mrs. Margaret Thatcher.

In many countries around the world there were changes that must have pleased all but the most hardened of male chauvinists.

European Common Market labour and social affairs ministers agreed on measures outlawing sex discrimination in job opportunities. They must become law by mid-1978.

Britain is one of the countries that has already passed laws covering the provisions. They came into force this week and banned, among other things, any hint of sex preference in job advertisements.

3 demonstrators shot in Portugal

OPORTO, Portugal, Jan. 1 (R). — Three demonstrators were killed in this northern Portuguese town Thursday night when paramilitary Republican Guards opened fire outside a military prison, hospital spokesmen said.

The demonstrators were protesting against the continued detention of more than 100 leftist soldiers and civilians in the Cusioas prison after an abortive military rebellion on November 25.

Another 12 people were wounded — one a four-year-old child in critical condition — the hospital spokesmen said.

First reports said the demonstrators tried to enter the prison when the front gates were opened to allow a vehicle out.

The three dead were all men.

The tough action taken by loyal troops to put down the leftist rebellion of Nov. 25 left the ruling coalition of centrists, socialists and non-communist left-wing officers with its authority much enhanced.

But the continuing imprisonment of those alleged to have been involved has been a source of mounting friction, in particular since most of them have been refused permission to see relatives and lawyers, except at Christmas and New Year.

Thursday's clash took place when the prisoners were out of their cells receiving visits from relatives, a military spokesman said.

The radical left-wing, although now excluded from power, has seized on the political prisoners' issue as an opportunity to challenge the Government and military chiefs.

There have been several earlier demonstrations outside Cusioas.

The Republican Guard on duty outside the prison were stoned when they tried to force the crowd back, according to the military spokesman.

The guard then fired into the air, but received a fresh volley of stones and a few pistol shots from the demonstrators in return, he said. It was then that the guard fired onto the crowd.

The spokesman said some of the detained soldiers helped restore order inside the prison.

About 150 soldiers and civilians were arrested after Nov. 25, but some have since been transferred from Cusioas to other barracks in Oporto and to the Caxias prison in Lisbon.

An M.E.A. investigation team which flew in from Beirut was to fly to the crash scene Friday, when the search would continue for the remaining bodies, the officials said.

The bodies flown into Dhahran were all that could be collected before darkness halted the desert search.

An oilman who knew the area said that the search must have been hampered by the very difficult terrain.

Occasional shots rang out among the shattered and bullet-riddled buildings and Beirut Radio said there was some sniping between the Ain al-Rummaneh and Shiyah.

Residents of Shiyah said about five mortar shells hit the area early Thursday morning, and some shelling was also reported against the Christian district of Fum al-Shebbak. Neither attack caused any casualties.

There have been no reports of incidents between the security forces and gunmen since the shoot-on-sight order went into effect.

But few people believe the troops can assert effective authority and the popular view is that the gunmen pulled back for reasons of their own.

Bustling activity filled many Beirut streets Thursday, which is a public holiday, although the country received yet another psychological blow with the crash in Saudi Arabia of an airliner belonging to Middle East Airlines.

The New Year has brought at least one sign of returning confidence about the security situation in Beirut—the glossy Cadillacs, Buicks, and Jaguars of the rich are back on the streets.

On the other hand Yigal Allon, the Israeli Foreign Minister, suggested that official talks between Jordan and Israel with the participation of Palestinians living in the West Bank should start in order to arrive at a preliminary agreement, it was reported by Maariv newspaper.

This suggestion, considered novel because of the inclusion of Palestinians from the West Bank, the paper added, was proposed and rejected during ministerial consultations in occupied Jerusalem, prior to the departure of Yigal Allon to the United States, and also prior to the meeting of the U.N. Security Council on January 12.

It added that "the essential thing is what do the men who were saved think. The essential is: What are the thoughts of their governments, their families and their peoples, to whom they were returned safe and sound?"

In Cairo, meanwhile, a leading Egyptian newspaper said that last month's kidnapping of OPEC oil ministers was carried out by the Libyan-backed Popular Revolutionary Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Mr. Ali Hamdi Gammal, Editor of the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram, claimed the operation in Vienna was masterminded by the group's leader, Dr. Wadie Haddad, and carried out with financial help from Libya.

Mr. Gammal said the guerillas were flown to Libya.

New York City police seek woman: possible bomb lead

NEW YORK, Jan. 1 (AFP). — New York City police are trying to contact a woman who claimed to have heard two men talking about a bomb shortly before the explosion at La Guardia Airport on Monday which killed 11 people and wounded 75.

A senior police official said that in spite of the strangeness of her testimony the woman might be able to give the police a lead.

E. Timor official requests U.N. envoy delay visit

JAKARTA, Jan. 1, (R). — security council resolution which also called for the immediate withdrawal of Indonesian forces in East Timor Thursday advised the United Nations to postpone the despatch of special envoy to the Portuguese colony.

Senhor Thomas Goncalves was quoted by Antara News Agency as saying in a broadcast that the U.N. would be making a "big mistake" if it ignored a message urging the postponement sent by the self-proclaimed Provisional Government of East Timor.

A U.N. spokesman said on Monday that Secretary General Kurt Waldheim would ignore the message urging a postponement. The envoy, Signor Vittorio Winspeare Guicciardi, is expected to arrive in Jakarta on January 12, Antara reported.

The message asked for a postponement in the interests of the "safety of the team".

Senhor Goncalves said the U.N. mission would fail if it refused to acknowledge the existence of the Provisional Government.

It was not clear whether his statement constituted a warning about the safety of the envoy.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Adam Malik was quoted Wednesday as saying the Jakarta Government would try to arrange for the envoy to visit East Timor, which has been wracked by four months of civil war. But he stressed that his Government could not force the Timorese either to welcome or reject the visit.

The visit stems from a U.N.
